Taken at His Word.

When Rossetti was a student of art he one day happened to go with some fellow students to the east end of London. There at a wharfside inn he saw an immense canvas on the barroom wall. After laughing at it for some time and thus provoking the innkeeper's wrath the following conversation took place:

"Where did you get that picture?"
"Oh, never mind, young man, where I got it!"

"What price do you set on it?"
"More than you can afford."

"Indeed!" said Rossetti. "Now, how much?"

"Three thousand pounds," replied the innkeeper.

At this there was a loud burst of laughter from the young artists.

"Do you know how much I would give you for your £3,000 picture?"

"How much?" asked the innkeeper.
"Three pounds," said Rossetti.

"Done," said the innkeeper promptly. And to his amazement and amusement Mr. Rossetti found himself the owner of the colossal daub.

Be a Lightning Calculator.

Multiplication is the most important of the fundamental rules of arithmetic. In large accounting departments mental arithmetic is often used to a very large extent, and the one who cannot perform this task without resorting to figuring the long way on paper has but a small chance of gaining a position worth having. Here is one little lesson in lightning multiplication. Supposing you want to multiply 53 by 84. First, multiply units by units, thus: 4 x 3 are 12, set down the 2 and carry 1. Multiply tens by units and units by tens, adding the 1 to carry to the first product, then add the two products together, thus: 4 x 5 are 20 and 1 to carry, 21, and 8 x 3 are 24, and 21 and 24 are 45, set down the 5 and carry 4. Now multiply the tens together and add the 4 you had to carry, thus: 8 x 5 are 40, and 4 makes 44. Set this amount down in the answer, and you will have the correct result—4,452.

Up a Shot Tower.

"It was a strange experience," said the huntsman. "As I ascended the spiral stairs of the tower I saw shot falling, like rain, around me. The shot tower was 200 feet high. At its base there was a tank of water for the shot to drop into. If it fell on the earth, you know, it would be flat instead of round. On top of the tower was a huge boiler filled with molten lead. The manager ladled the lead into a percolator, a kind of strainer, and thence it fell into the cistern of cold water 200 feet below. It took it three seconds to fall. They made different sizes of shot on the tower by using different percolators—big holes for big shot, small holes for fine shot, and so on. The water in the cistern had to be changed every little while. It would have become so hot otherwise that it would have kept the shot soft."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

They Rarely Fell Trees.

Most of the Spaniards dislike to fell trees or cut live timber of any sort, and this fact perhaps accounts for the giant trees of California. The Spaniards two centuries ago pushed their way through Mexico to California, and save the clearing of paths through the dense forests, not a twig did their axes chop down. Nor do the Spaniards transplanted to the new world ever destroy timber. They continue to build their houses of stone and mortar, at great expense of money and physical exertion, when timber in abundance surrounds them, out of which they could construct log houses, as did other pioneers, at a minimum of cost and labor. The Spaniard does not even fell trees for firewood, but picks up dead limbs as they fall to the ground or pulls them from the trees with his lariat.—London Express.

The Victoria Cross.

The intrinsic value of the Victoria cross, the most highly prized decoration in army and navy, is about 1½ pence. It was instituted by royal warrant on Jan. 29, 1856, as a reward of gallantry of all ranks, and the first presentation (of sixty-two crosses) was made by the late Queen Victoria in person on Friday, June 26, 1857. It is in the shape of a Maltese cross and is made to this day out of metal from old Russian cannon captured at Sevastopol.—St. James' Gazette.

Snow at a Halfpenny a Pound.

Snow is sold in the north of Sicily, where it fetches about a halfpenny a pound. It is a government monopoly, and the prince of Palermo derives the greater part of his income from it. The snow, which is gathered on the mountains in felt covered baskets, is widely bought in the cities for refrigerating purposes.—London Tit-Bits.

In a Bad Way.

"I fear that my husband will break down! He is suffering from brain exhaustion!"
"How dreadful! What are his symptoms?"
"He latterly keeps repeating himself in his excuses for coming home late from the club, dear!"

UP TO THE PEOPLE.

The House yesterday, by a vote of 49 to 43 refused reconsideration of the Stewart Bill, which was defeated on Saturday by a vote of 43 to 42.

In order that the people of the State may exactly understand the nature of the action taken, the bill is here published in full:

"Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Kentucky:

"That in any civil action for libel, charging the publication of an erroneous statement alleged to be libelous, it shall be relevant and competent evidence for either party to prove the fact that the plaintiff requested retraction or omitted to request retraction. The defendant may also allege and give proof that the matter alleged to have been published without malice, and that the defendant in the next regular issue of the paper or publication, after receiving demand in writing to correct and to retract said statement, or in the next regular issue of the newspaper or publication, after the service of summons and complaint, if no such notice has been given to the defendant before the commencement of the action, did publish a sufficient correction, retraction, explanation or rectification in as conspicuous and public a manner as that in which said alleged libelous statement was published, in at least two successive issues of the same periodical publication. Upon proof of such facts to the satisfaction of the jury, the plaintiff shall not be entitled to punitive damages; and the defendant shall be liable only to pay actual damages. And upon the publication of such correction, retraction, explanation or rectification, the defendant may plead same in mitigation of damages."

The bill asks nothing but fair play for a State press that has stood at all times with unselfish zeal for the best interests of Kentucky. It asks no favors but merely that every newspaper in the State shall have the same opportunity to correct an error as an individual unwittingly committed.

It does not absolve any paper from the payment of damages where a published retraction of damaging statements fails to even score for the damage done. Had the bill passed no man in the State would have been denied the right to recover actual damages. The only restriction placed upon an aggrieved individual would have been the abolition of his present license to obtain punitive damages far in excess of the injury received.

The Times has no wish to question the motives of any legislator who voted against the bill. Such was his privilege, if he chose to make such exercise of it. It cannot escape recognition that by that vote wrong has been done to the strongest factor in the State for development of the State and that this wrong was inflicted by men who have never failed to appeal to the press for aid in the furtherance of their personal ambitions.

The Legislature has refused justice to the State Press. The only recourse left the press is to see that the others of the State, before the next General Assembly is elected, are made acquainted with the meaning and purpose of the Stewart Bill, and that every candidate for a party nomination and that every party nominee is required to define his position for or against the passage of such a measure in the next General Assembly. The people, regardless of party, will thus arbitrate and decide the case. It will be as it should be, one of the issues that will enter into the next campaign in Kentucky.

The present libel law in Kentucky is 300 years behind that which prevails in England, and more unjust and oppressive than that which is to be found on the statute books of any other State. Its repeal is required in order to enable the Kentucky press to protect itself against wanton wrong; it will injure no honest man and deprive no honest layer of fees to which he is justly entitled.

It is in the power of the State press to see that the next General Assembly puts an end to the unfair discrimination now exercised against the press. The Times stands with and for the State press in the attainment of that end.—Louisville Times.
